

Life Sciences and IP Lawyer Jennifer Camacho Joins Greenberg Traurig as Shareholder in Boston

BOSTON, MA (June 17, 2010) -- The international law firm Greenberg Traurig LLP announced that Jennifer A. Camacho has joined its Boston office as a Shareholder in the Intellectual Property and Technology Practice Group. Prior to joining Greenberg Traurig, Camacho was a Partner with Proskauer Rose LLP in the Patent Law, Intellectual Property and Life Sciences Groups.

As an experienced intellectual property lawyer, Camacho has worked extensively with clients in the life sciences industry. Her clients include biotech companies at the forefront of synthetic biology, metabolic engineering, industrial biotechnology, and biofuels; as well as innovative companies in the pharmaceutical, biological and medical device sectors.

Previously, Camacho was Chief Patent Counsel and Vice President of Intellectual Property at Codon Devices, Inc., an international biotechnology company in the emerging field of synthetic biology. At Codon, she was responsible for the strategic development and implementation of the company's intellectual property portfolio. Camacho worked closely with their research and development group, structuring third-party collaborative relationships and providing intellectual property guidance in connection with the company's product development initiatives across a wide variety of market applications. As a member of Codon's executive management team, Camacho also provided cross-functional, hands-on general counsel throughout the organization.

"We are excited to have a talented and experienced intellectual property practitioner join the Greenberg Traurig team as we continue to strategically expand the Boston office," said Gary R. Greenberg, Co-Managing Shareholder of the Boston office. "Jennifer's capabilities, combined with her in-house experience, will round out and enhance the existing capabilities we can offer our clients locally, nationally and internationally."

With the addition of Camacho, Greenberg Traurig's Boston office has grown to nearly 75 lawyers since its founding in August 1999. The office offers the firm's clients full-service capabilities with a wide-range of legal experience, including corporate, litigation, real estate, intellectual property, public finance, tax, and labor & employment.

Greenberg Traurig's Intellectual Property and Technology Practice provides strategic counsel for clients requiring in-depth understanding of both specialized technology and the complex dynamics of worldwide distribution. The Greenberg Traurig team includes more than 200 full-time IP and technology attorneys, approximately 100 of whom are registered with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office.

Camacho received her J.D. from Boston College Law School and her B.S. in Cell and Structural Biology from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. In addition, she spent time as a research assistant in molecular biology and genetic engineering at Harvard University and the University of Illinois.
